When I create a class, how can I get access to the properties of an object within an array? In Java you would use `getAttribute()`. Does this also work in JS? My class, `example1`, is as follows: `example1.prototype.getElement = function() { return this.elements; };`; and `example2` is: `example2.prototype.getElement = function(foo) { return foo.elements; };` So I want to know if I can do something like the following: `example2.prototype.getElement(example2.example1);` and be able to access elements as such: `example2.getElement.foo.elements;` Or do I have to make a new variable which assigns the value to `foo.elements`? Thanks! A: You should really read up on how to use prototypes in javascript. Since you've chosen to work directly with prototypes and not using methods you should use the 'new' keyword to call methods. Also, using `this.elements` in the constructor's prototype's constructor's `getElement` is wrong. Constructors should be only used to initialize other variables or objects. Take the following code for example. The first method is your direct `getElement` call, and the second is the proper use of the new keyword.

keyword. var MyObject = function () { this.name = "John Smith"; this.elements = []; } MyObject.prototype.getElement = function () { return this.elements; }
